Together, we can help ensure that when someone in our industry faces a serious hardship, they have somewhere to turn for support."

APSG represents a powerful alliance of independent automotive aftermarket organizations and has consistently demonstrated leadership not only through business excellence, but also through its commitment to strengthening the communities it serves.

"One of the things that makes this industry special is the way people step up to help one another," said Jon Owens, President of the AACF Board of Trustees. "APSG has been doing that for years through their support of AACF. Their commitment as a Champion Donor helps ensure that when someone in our industry faces a serious hardship, there's a place to turn for help.
